Ce banc rouge est un concept des bancs des années 1950, à l'époque où l'utilisation du cuir et la mise en avance des couleurs vives se pratiquait dans tous les restaurants appelés « american diner ». L'idée est très simple - deux coussins séparés se mettent perpendiculairement et s'attachent à la base du banc, composée du bois peint avec des couleurs foncées.

Le coussin supérieur reflète le style streamline moderne des années 40, tandis que la partie inférieure se penche vers le simplisme moderne du milieu des années 50.
